Step Three – Facility Tour Registration

United Natural Foods Green Tour – Monday, June 9, 2008 – 7:30am-11:30am – Additional $25 USD fee required.

United Natural Foods' four-acre rooftop solar system qualified for a $2.1 million rebate from utility Pacific Gas and Electric. 7,000 panels power the 487,000 sq. ft. DC, including 25,000 sq. ft. of freezer storage that is maintained at -14°F. The one-megawatt system is expected to generate approximately 1.5 MM kilowatt hours of electricity annually—enough to power 180 homes. The company earns energy credits by automatically exporting excess power back to the PG&E electrical grid, then draws on the credits whenever it needs more electricity than the solar panels generate, such as at night. The company projects annual savings of $300K on power costs, and expects the system to pay for itself in three years.

California Cold Logistics, A Wholly Owned Division of Tony's Fine Foods Tour – Wednesday, June 11, 2008 – 7:30am-11:30am – Additional $25 USD fee required.

Tony's Fine Foods is the largest independently owned specialty perishable foods distributor in California. The 120,000 sq. ft. facility located on 28 acres is one of the area's most modern and efficient. It is the largest privately owned solar installation in Northern California, with a one-megawatt system that automatically exports excess electricity into Pacific Gas and Electric's power grid. Tony's fleet of multi-temperature trucks and trailers are carefully designed for hot Valley temperatures. The 20,000 sq. ft. chilled dock with 20 sealed loading bays allows perishables to be kept in a constant 35°F climate whether in storage, on the dock, or a truck. The company is currently experimenting with bio-diesel fuel in its trailers.
